We believe your healing is holistic. It involves your mind, body and spirit. As a result, Rogers offers supportive spiritual care resources specifically designed to address your spirituality, regardless of religion or belief system.

What is spiritual care?

Spiritual care can address your spiritual or religious needs during treatment. Your spiritual needs may include unresolved life questions, such as how you should make sense of your mental health situation or how you define good and bad. Or, you may be looking for the continued sense of hope and community offered by your religion, which spiritual care can offer.

While in our care, you have access to the following resources, depending on your treatment goals, program and medical status, and location:

- Spiritual care reflection groups
- One-on-one consultations with a chaplain
- Chapel, including a spiritual resource library (Milwaukee and Oconomowoc)
- On-site ecumenical worship services (Easter and Christmas)
- Transportation to churches for worship (in selected programs)
- On-site one-on-one sessions with community clergy

Each member of the spiritual care team has advanced training, preparing them to use an inclusive approach in meeting you, wherever that may be, on your spiritual path.

Our spiritual care department is funded entirely by the Rogers Behavioral Health Foundation.
